

NCSML Honored with National Medal

Bob Schaffer, owner of Czech Cottage in Cedar Rapids, Iowa and NCSML President/CEO Gail Naughton accept the National Medal for Museum and Library Service from First Lady Michelle Obama in Washington, D.C. May 8. The medal is the nation's highest honor conferred on museums and libraries for service to the community.

Putting Our Best 'Face' Forward

Free events celebrate opening of new permanent exhibit June 15

Ever wonder what it would have been like to be part of the crowd in Wenceslaus Square as they jingled their keys to celebrate the fall of Communist party rule?

You'll find out when you're surrounded by actual sound and video of the exciting scene from 1989. It's just one of many immersive experiences in the NCSML's new permanent exhibition, Faces of Freedom: The Czech and Slovak Journey.

Join us on June 14 and 15 for the opening of this spectacular display that tells the tumultuous story of Czech and Slovak life.

FROM OUR PRESIDENT

As this issue of MOST goes to press, I have just returned from accepting the National Medal for Community Service from First Lady Michelle Obama. Chair of the Board Lu Barta Barron, Past Chair Gary Rozek and community representative Bob Schaffer were also at the ceremony in the East Room of the White House. It is exciting, humbling and gratifying for the museum and library to receive this medal—the highest honor given to a museum in the United States. It will be displayed in Rozek Grand Hall. Everyone played a part in earning this recognition, so please enjoy!

It is such a welcome improvement to have the space to do special exhibits. You can see in this issue of MOST that we are taking advantage of our new digs in a big way.

We've known for a long time about Secretary Madeleine Albright's Read My Pins exhibit and were just waiting for the chance to host it. It has opened in major cities across the country to rave reviews. In fact, it has been so popular they have extended the time it will be touring and there are plans for it to go to international museums, as well.

If that weren't enough excitement for one summer, the long-awaited opening of the new permanent exhibit is June 14 and 15. Faces of Freedom: The Czech and Slovak Journey is the product of almost three years of work by a creative and dedicated staff team lead by Curator Stefanie Kohn, along with our fantastic exhibit designers, Xibitz and Lord Cultural Resources. Visitors today want an interactive experience where they can step into others' shoes; where they can feel they "were there." This exhibit does that and a whole lot more.

When it was founded in 1974, the NCSML's responsibility was to save the cultural artifacts and teach about and celebrate the history of the Czechs and Slovaks. Now, 40 years later, we have come to understand that if we want to assure the history and culture remain relevant, we must expand their interpretation.

The opportunity is in the lessons of the Czech and Slovak story both in Europe and in the United States—lessons about the importance of freedom and identity, family and community, human rights and dignity. Visitors to the exhibit will follow the path to freedom in Czechoslovakia and in the United States, and in doing so, learn about themselves and how they regard their own freedom.

Robert Řehák, second secretary and cultural attaché from the Czech embassy in Washington, D.C., said that Faces of Freedom rivals any Smithsonian exhibit and sets a new standard for history exhibits. You won't want to miss the opening of Faces of Freedom and all of our exciting summer events.

All my best,

Gail Naughton

It seems like the NCSML is getting back to a new normal. The Grand Opening last summer was a smashing success, along with the blockbuster exhibit of Alphonse Mucha and another record-breaking BrewNost! event.

This year promises to be just as exciting, and I'm thrilled to chair the board for another year.

In May, the NCSML opened a new exhibit featuring provocative pins from the former Secretary of State Madeleine Albright's personal collection. Secretary Albright was at the NCSML to kick off her exhibit on May 17 and 18. I met Madam Secretary two years ago when I was part of a delegation that traveled to Prague for the Woodrow Wilson Statue Rededication.

I found her to be humorous and very approachable, and it was an honor to host her and her personal collection of pins at the NCSML.

The moment many of us have been waiting for will happen in June: the unveiling of the new permanent exhibit titled Face of Freedom: The Czech and Slovak Journey. This is the final major project for recovery and will truly be an exhibit to celebrate.

Please join us for any and all of these events and visit our website to learn more about other exciting and inspiring things happening at www.NCSML.org.

Sincerely,

Lu Barta Barron

20 Years of Independence Marked

Following the 1989 Velvet Revolution, which marked the end of communist rule, Czechoslovakia peacefully split into the Czech Republic and Slovak Republic on January 1, 1993.

2012 by the Numbers

The NCSML served 63,000 people in 2012, including general admissions to the galleries, library researchers, school groups, and program and event attendees.

Visitors came from all 50 states and 23 countries.

212 items were added to the genealogy resources in the Skala Bartizal Library.

Artifact collections were moved from temporary storage to new artifact storage area. They have moved 5 times since the flood.

Curatorial staff created 6 exhibitions and 9 artifact displays between July and December.

47 different schools and youth groups visited the NCSML.

150 people volunteered 10,900 hours.

98 interviews were added to the oral history program, Recording Voices & Documenting Memories of Czech & Slovak Americans.

One 15-foot-tall Christmas tree, decked with ornaments and garland salvaged from the flood and new crafts from local children, greeted visitors over the holiday season.

15,913 Alphonse Mucha items were sold in the Museum Store.

Undocumented number of visitors displayed their enthusiasm for all things Alphonse Mucha, including tattoos, apparel, and art.

through the World Wars, the rise and fall of communism, and the pursuit of new opportunities in the United States.

Featuring more than 7,000 square feet of interactive environments, oral histories, and historic artifacts, Faces of Freedom does more than simply educate visitors about the Czech and Slovak story. It puts you right in the middle of the drama. Real stories of real people inspired the Faces of Freedom exhibition. Get an up-close look at life under oppression, from the black Tatra police car on display to the replica of a watchtower on the border. A 1940s living room immerses you in radio broadcasts and footage as WWII rages on. A re-created steam ship helps tell the story of the struggles and triumphs of American immigrants, along with a wealth of interactive exhibits and video panels.

Many of the NCSML's most beloved artifacts will be displayed, including a JAWA motorcycle, glass, porcelain, and a rotating display of 12 kroje (folk costumes). Create your own shows with a puppet theater, or sample a selection of Czech and Slovak music ranging from classical to rock.

An exhibition unlike any other in the nation, Faces of Freedom is everyone's story. For more details, visit www.NCSML.org.

Cernan to Kick Off Celebration

A celebration three years in the making begins Friday, June 14 at 6:30 p.m. with a cocktail reception and intimate dinner featuring guest speaker Captain Eugene Cernan, the last man to walk on the moon.

Hear Captain Cernan tell the fascinating story of his life on both American and lunar soil. The son of a Slovak father and a Czech mother, Captain Cernan is a veteran of three missions into space, including Apollo 17. He is also a member of the NCSML National Advisory Board.

Tickets are $100 per person and can be purchased by contacting Elizabeth at (319) 362-8500 x 205 or eschlegel@NCSML.org.

Bring your lawn chairs or blankets to this open-air theatrical event. Commissioned by the NCSML, The Finder's Daughter is a world-premiere play based on our groundbreaking Oral History Program.

Zdena's father is a community organizer and publisher of underground newspapers that detail the "disappeared" under the Russian regime. But when he disappears himself, Zdena must live with her father's best friend Marek, a former supporter of the Russian regime who still now struggles to carry on her father's work. As the vanishings get closer and closer, Zdena is forced to uncover what happened to one father before she loses another.

Using oral histories, Czech and Slovak folktales and historical information, The Finder's Daughter looks at the families we make and the resiliency of the human spirit in the face of losing everything.

NCSML Hosts Madeleine Albright's Famed Pin Collection

Portrait by Timothy Greenfield-Sanders

See Read My Pins: The Madeleine Albright Collection through October 27, 2013 in the Petrik Gallery. This traveling exhibition contains more than 280 pins displayed at museums and Presidential Libraries across the nation since 2009.

Secretary Albright chose pins for their symbolic value. Matched with her personal anecdotes and photos, the pins range from dime-store finds to family heirlooms and designer creations. The exhibition explores the collection's historic significance as well as the power of jewelry to communicate through a style and language of its own.

Highlighting the exhibition is the brooch that began Secretary Albright's unusual use of pins as a tool in her diplomatic arsenal. After Saddam Hussein's press referred to her as an "unparalleled serpent," UN Ambassador Albright wore a snake pin for her next meeting with the Iraqis. The press and the Secretary's counterparts quickly learned that her choice of pin sent a message.

The collection includes a variety of animal brooches, like the ladybug that signified a good mood, and the crab and wasp that meant the opposite. Other highlights include Czech garnets, Alphonse Mucha-inspired pins and the Order of the White Lion medal, given to Secretary Albright by President Václav Havel.

Born in former Czechoslovakia, Secretary Albright came to the United States with her parents after the Soviets took over Czechoslovakia in 1948. Nominated by President Bill Clinton in 1996 and unanimously confirmed by a U.S. Senate vote, Madeleine Albright served as the first female Secretary of State from 1997 to 2001. She was also the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations from 1993 to 1997. In May 2012, she was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom by U.S. President Barack Obama.

Read My Pins was organized by the Museum of Arts and Design in New York. Support for the original exhibition was provided by Bren Simon and for the exhibition catalogue by St. John Knits.

Special thanks to the following sponsors, whose philanthropic support made the Read My Pins exhibition and accompanying events possible:

Oral History Project Met with Success

Oral History Coordinator Rosie Johnston interviews Roman Scholtz in his home.

Recording Voices & Documenting Memories of Czech & Slovak Americans, the groundbreaking NCSML oral history project, continues on in Chicago and Washington, D.C. and has expanded to New York City and the San Francisco Bay area. Since September 2011, 135 interviews have been recorded with Czechs and Slovaks who emigrated to the United States during the Cold War era, as well as younger immigrants who came following the Velvet Revolution in 1989.

A number of the oral history interviews have been made into a new exhibit, Leaving Czechoslovakia, which had its debut at Oak Park (Illinois) Public Library in May 2012. The exhibit has also been shown in New York City, Des Moines, and the NCSML. Project coordinator Rosie Johnston has presented the project at conferences in Vienna and Sovinec (Czech Republic). The oral histories were a highlight of the NCSML Czech and Slovak History and Culture Conference in April and will be featured again at the Faces of Freedom: The Czech and Slovak Journey opening events.

Browse the Museum Store

Take home your own designer creation from the Museum Store, featuring beautiful pins and jewelry in the style of those seen in the Read My Pins: The Madeleine Albright Collection:

Michael Michaud—

Artist's work featured in Read My Pins

Michael Michaud creates his unique jewelry by casting molds directly from botanical elements, using an actual leaf, branch or flower. The beautifully detailed molds are cast in either bronze or silver and handcrafted in New York City. Michaud has been creating his beautiful Silver Seasons Jewelry Collection for over 20 years. Michaud describes his jewelry as 'copies of nature.'

Lilien Czech—Selection inspired by Read My Pins and made in the Czech Republic

Each piece of Lilien Czech jewelry is handmade by traditional technique. The vibrant and colorful selection features a range of styles from dragonflies and snakes to dogs and flowers all decked in Czech glass.

Vintage—Selection inspired by themes in Read My Pins

Featuring patriotic styles, dainty, and rare finds, each piece was selected with the exhibit in mind.

Part illustrated memoir, part social history, Read My Pins: Stories from a Diplomat's Jewel Box provides an intimate look at Secretary Albright's life through the brooches she wore. The exhibit catalogue features more than 200 photographs along with compelling and often humorous stories about jewelry, global politics, and the life of one of America's most accomplished and fascinating public servants.

Welcome Center Occupies Kosek Building

The Cedar Rapids Area Convention & Visitors Bureau (CVB) moved into the Kosek Building, 87 16th Ave. SW, in Czech Village. The NCSML leased office and store/resource space to the CVB serving as a Welcome Center, allowing visitors to interact with both organizations when they stop. CVB visitors will be able to tour the Rising Above: The Story of a People and a Flood exhibition at no charge, courtesy of the NCSML.

The Kosek Building served as the NCSML's home while the primary facility was relocated and expanded. While the Kosek Building remains part of the NCSML campus, plans have always called for leasing the second floor office suite to another organization now that NCSML administrative offices have returned to the primary building.
